

FROM THE PHENIX. TO MISS -, OF PASQOTANK. BY A GENTLEMAN OF EDENTON. Every man is false they say Who declares that beauty's eyes, Launch a brighter, purci ray Than the stars that light the skies.

But how faithfully they sing, They, who've seen thy eyes can prove Stars alone their light may fling, But'tis not the light of love.

I have looked, and looking lov'd, I have felt, and feeling sighed, Every pulse with pleasure mov'd When thy look to mine replied.

Such is not the silent power Sway'd by stars that heavenward shine No-by day or moonlight hour Spells like these are left to thine.

AGRICULTURAL.

FROM THE GENESEE FARMER. VARIETIES OF INDIAN CORN.

The following is an extract from a paper read before the Agricultural Society of Fred- here; so far, then, nature is true to her own The kind of corn cultivated, I believe to fully active climate and productive soil, will find the come striking analogy verified by exbe of greater importance than is generally find the same striking analogy verified by exsupposed. Any Virginian who has travelled perience. The season is approaching for the northwards, must have observed the difference between their crops and ours. He must have seen that the stalks diminish in size, while the crop per acre, obviously increases; and should it come up to the writer's expectaand yet ours is notoriously the soil and cli- tions, I shall think my past life not wholly mate for growing corn. I think the difference spent in vain. may be attributed to the kind of corn cultivated, a kind which enables them to plant much thicker than we do. Here, most of us plant stalk, bearing generally one, occasionally two junk bottle one pint of good gin and one ears, and not admitting thick planting. There, ounce of indigo; shake well together, and turn the stalk is low, is planted very thick, and it down him. I have known it, from person-

Counting three stalks at this distance, and allowing three ears to each, any given space, there, will yield sev- common clay of the size of a goose egg burnen or eight ears to our one; small ears certainly, ed till it becomes red, pulverized with the ly, but still large enough account for the great same quantity of hard wood coal, mixed with menced with the old full-breed Virginia gourd- seldom fails to cure the worst cases of scourseed, and stuck to it for six or eight years; ing. If one dose does not cure, try anobut finding that on common land many stalks ther. were too late in curing, or did not ear at all; I determined to change my seed. My next variety was the "Taliaferro white flint." This sort is touched with the gourd-seed, but it is superior to it in having a smaller stalk, ripening earlier, bearing more ears, and a harder and heavier grain. I then tried what is called the "Alsop corn," resembling the Taliaferro in other respects, but somewhat smaller in stalk, and superior in number of cars, often is with equal pleasure that I assure the public, that producing two, three, and sometimes a greater no pains or exertions shall be dispensed with, nenumbers of ears. This corn I still plant. I made one experiment with the Maryland twin corn and thought it as prolific as the Alsop; but the grain being lighter and the stalk taller, it was abandoned. Last winter I purchased, in Washington, a small quantity of 'Baden corn,' and planted with it a rich lot when required. of two acres. It came up and grew off well, was the tallest corn I ever saw, averaged five or six shoots to the stalk, and promised at one time to make a great crop. But it suffered nearly twice as much as the rest of my corn, from the heat or drouth of the summer, and was broken off by a wind in August, which did very little injury to the rest of the

It will readily be seen that I consider thickheavy crops of corn per acre. But thick planting with a large kind, is cut of the question. At the same time, it must be borne in mind, that as we increase the number, we diminish the size of the ears, and add to the labor of gathering and husking. Every judicious farmer will decide, from experience, how far he can carry this process; and will stop as soon as he begins to doubt whether he is paid for his additional labor. Dismissing all speculation on this point, I believe we may safely plant any small variety of corn, at the rate of one stalk to every ten square feet on tolerable land, which would give about 4360 stalks, and from six to ten barrels of grain to the acre. I will only add, in con-clusion, that although I have frequently been deterred by the influence which custom exercises over the mind of every one, from planting corn as thick as I was inclined to, I have, in no one instance, exceeded the usual rate without adding to the crop.

crop. It did not of course fill up or ripen well, and I fed it to hogs. But as it certainly had more shoots than any corn I ever saw, I probably turn out to be a very prolific variety.

FROM THE CULTIVATOR. EXPERIMENTS WITH LEACHED

ASHES. East Hartford, Conn. Feb. 1839. Friend Buel:-As your motto is for the "improvement of the soil and the mind," I hope you will give publicity to a discovery in land, where they are bought up at an expense of 35 to 50 cents a bushel, and considered a profitable investment at that. The vast quantities bought annually in this country, (where they are considered of little value, and of none on clayey land,) and shipped to Long Island, induced me to think that the saline matter in the soil and atmosphere, was more the cause of their wonderful effect upon vegetation, than any inherent quality in it. To give theory the test of experience, I mixed ashes with common salt, but the salt was too long in dissolving, to combine chemically; the next was to sow the salt and ashes afterwards: this did better; my next to wet the dry unleached ashes with a strong brine, and after standing a sufficient time to spread readily with a shovel, applied them as a top dressing to turnips and potatoes. In this last experiment the success met my higest expectations; the potato crop was quadrupled, and the differ-ence in the turnip yield still greater; but the soil as in the application of all high stimulants, should have a moderate dressing of some kind of manure, and it will be found in excellent order for grass or grain afterwards.

It may be observed of crops manured and dressed in this manner, that the leaves appear of a light pea green, instead of the darker green, denoting too much top-whilst the tuber of the potato, and the bulb of the turnip, showed the whole strength of the plant to have centered there. To carry the analogy still further, I have given the land liberal dressing of plaster after the ashes so prepared, but not the least benefit to the crop could be perceived, any more than if it had been used within a mile of the ocean-of course it was labor

It is very desirable that some enterprising farmers of each county in the western part of yours, and of other States, where leached ashes are in abundance and useless, to try the experiment of wetting them when dry, with strong brine, no matter how old or salt; (if the price of salt is too high.) The lands found best adaped to this kind of manure, are the poorer description of sandy and gravelly soil, and description of sandy and gravelly soil, and this agrees perfectly with my short experience will be paid for his delivery to me, at Columbia, here; so far, then, nature is true to her own proper time of trial-let it be upon corn, potatoes, grass, upon spongy wet land, or newly stocked down, turnips and wheat in autumn,

Yours, respectfully, DANIEL EASTON.
